Holdup man nets $80 in Livermore

A lone holdup man armed with a small caliber revolver took about $80 from Mario's Liquor and Delicatessen in Livermore shortly after 11 a.m. yesterday.

An employe alone at the time said the robber, described as in his mid-30's, 5-foot-9 and about 150 pounds, bought a single can of beer then demanded all cash.

No other persons were involved in the incident and no shots were fired and the holdup man fled before police arrived.

Homeowners speak out for Jarvis

Sweeping property tax changes proposed by the Jarvis-Gann initiative are the result of years of stalling and indecision by the state legislature, according to advocates of the measure.

"The legislators brought this on through their indifference to tax reform and forced the public to take drastic measures. It isn't as though this issue came up last week," says Phyllis Couper, president of the Happy Valley Homeowners' Association in Pleasanton.

"The people we've elected most of the time have campaigned on holding the line on taxes put nothing's been done'" adds Ed Laczynski of the San Ramon Homeowners' Association.

Homeowners' and taxpayers' associations have lined up in support of the June 6 ballot measure and insist that if passed it would not lead to the wholesale collapse of services predicted by state and local government officals.

Jarvis would limit property taxes to 1 percent of fair market (or appraised) value and use the values of 1975-76 as a base year. Annual inflation increases would be limited to 2 percent and officals have predicted this limit would mean an annual revenue loss of $8 billion statewide.

However Jarvis supporters insist essential services would not suffer if the legislature took steps to help meet the cost though they add — and demand — that spending be reduced overall, not merely refinanced.

"They (legislators) have not listened when we said we want relief, we don't want all the services you've been giving us and we want you to stop spending our money," adds Laczynski.

Some services will be cut back, perhaps eliminated, supporters admit, but they contend essentials like fire and police protection and schools would be unharmed if the state provided aid to local governments while they learned to work within the new guidelines.

James McFarlane, a member of the ad hoc Alameda County Committee for Tax Reform, agrees and points to the state's $5 billion budget surplus as one potential source of short-term relief.

If passed June 6, Jarvis would take effect July 1 and McFarlane acknowledges most agencies would need help while making the adjustment.

But he adds, "The legislature, instead of crying the blues about all they're going to lose should be coming up with creative alternatives — that's what we've got them for. The people didn't get themselves in this spending situation, the legislature did."

Valley real estate has soared in value in recent years but now many homeowners hope the Jarvis initiative will help hold the line on property taxes.

$2 million loss and staff reductions

Parness gives Jarvis fair warning

LIVERMORE — The picture painted by city manager Bill Parness for the city if the Jarvis Initiative is passed is grim. Anticipating an estimated nearly two million dollars in revenue loss, the city manager says staff reductions could be 100 people.

Parness prepared an in-depth report on the financial condition of the city under the proposed tax cut for a special study session of city council and planning commission at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Although he emphasized that personnel cuts at this stage would be hypothetical, he gave a breakdown of possible reductions. "Before any actual proposals for personnel reductions are made," he wrote in his report, "it would necessitate an in-depth study of the various services offered by the city and careful prioritizing by the city council."

But for the sake of study, he broke down some service level cuts, including a reduction from the current four patrol beats for two shifts per day in the police department, to three patrol beats. Crime prevention unit would be cancelled, and animal control and enforcement program would be reduced, as would the clerical staff.

The library currently operates 12 hours a day, five days a week with eight hours on Saturday. Under the possible cutbacks, fewer personnel would necessitate only eight hours a day service, five days a week.

Fire department personnel cutbacks would mean closing one station and reducing the manning level of engine companies from the present three to slightly over two people. The fire prevention bureau would be closed, Parness indicated in his report.

Personnel reductions in the park and trees department could mean only basic level maintenance for major street tree placements and care of some grass areas. All median and beautification improvements could not be tended.

And Parness said in the report the Springtown Golf Course, just rennovated and improved at city expense, would have to be closed. Maintenance of Las Positas would be restricted to minimum care only, probably just for the greens.

The tax figures were broken down in the report, showing the city's estimated revenue loss with and without homeowners and business inventory exemptions. Figures also were given if the tax base is to be figured on 1975-76 net assessed valuation and with the figures extended to the present fiscal year 1977-78, "assuming the initiative would permit as stated therein annual escalation of 2 per cent per year of assessed valuation over this (1975-76) term."

City to fight tax plan

PLEASANTON — The city is investigating a way to fight the Jarvis/Gann tax initiative.

If legal, the city may place its own initiative on the June ballot, giving local voters the right to continue being taxed $1.80 for every $100 in assessed evaluation even if the Jarvis initiative should pass.

The controversial ballot measure would limit property taxes to 1 percent of market value. All levels of government in the state are decrying the measure, claiming it would prove a financial disaster if approved by two-thirds of California voters in June.

Bigger gates for LLL

Lawrence Livermore Laboratory will widen two entrances to the nuclear facility this spring for easier access.

The east and northwest gate entrances will be widened to double lane entry to relieve traffic congestion.

The Lab will also resubmit a proposal to the Department of Energy to construct a new entrance to serve the northwest section of the site from Vasco Road. That proposal had been rejected last year due to budget constraints.

Speed patrol in San Ramon needs funding

MARTINEZ — If county residents in the unincorporated areas want more control over speeding drivers they may have to ante up some extra tax dollars on their own.

In a report to be presented to supervisors next Tuesday, at 9 a.m. the Public Works Departments states California law prohibits the sheriff from spending money to investigate misdemeanor violations of the Vehicle Code.

The only way under state law to provide more traffic enforcement is for residents to create service taxing areas.

Residents throughout the unincorporated areas have been complaining about the lack of traffic enforcement for years. Especially vociferous have been the residents of the San Ramon Valley.

Leroy Vukad of the county Public Works Department said Friday most of the time residents believe a stop sign will solve the problem.

Complaints came so hot and heavy last fall, that county public works officials finally decided to have a work shop for the Board of Supervisors and interested county residents on the philosophy of placing stop signs.

It was during the November workshop that supervisors directed the County Administrator, the Public Works Director and the Sheriff to investigate ways to provide traffic enforcement.

Weather

San Ramon Valley Schools

Housing study suggested

DANVILLE— The administration of the San Ramon Valley Unified School District is recommending the board take a broader tact in forming a citizens committee to study student housing.

Due in part to opposition expressed by parents in the Twin Creeks area, the board will consider formation of a citizens' advisory committee to study and report on alternatives for housing students.

Trustees will convene at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Education Center, 699 Old Orchard Dr.

At their last meeting, trustees had considered forming another year-round schools committee. But, a recommendation from the administration against forming a panel just to study year-round schools and comments by a Twin Creeks parents representative have apparently caused trustees to look at a citizens' panel on alternative housing.

Such a group would study all the options available, including busing out, portables, double sessions, year-round schools, and a bond election.

The latter prospect has been turned down, at least for the remainder of this year.

If the board acts to appoint a committee, it presumably would nominate one, two or three persons per trustee.

Orrin Bachelor, business manager for the district, will present data on the Jarvis-Gann tax initiative so the board can discuss the potential impact on the 1978-79 budget.

Trustees will also act to approve new courses planned for Pine Valley Intermediate and California High School for 1978-79, contract with the R-7 service area for development of a neighborhood park at Stone Valley School, hear first reading of a policy on health education, consider a resolution declaring the district impacted (as defined under recently enacted County Ordinance 78-10—availability of schools), and approve a contract with the architectural firm of Haines, Tatarian and Ipsen for additions to Montévideo Elementary School.

Mori rated

Politically he's a moderate

Assemblyman Floyd Mori has always billed himself as a "moderate" politically and now he has proof of it in black and white because the Americans for Democratic Action, a liberal lobbying group, has given him a 50 per cent rating on their legislative scorecard.

The ADA, which numbers the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey among its founders, rated all legislators and also the legislature as a whole for the 1977 session.

Sen. John Holmdahl, the Valley's senator, received a 30 per cent scorecard from the liberal group.

Mori told The Times that a 50 per cent rating on the 20 sample votes is "fair and accurate."

"I've always said I am a moderate. I've never considered myself a flaming liberal or ultra - conservative. Most people in my district probably think of themselves as moderates and I feel I am close to the district's ideas," said Mori.

Among the issues on which ADA based its rating were restoration of the death penalty, banning use of flourocarbon aerosols, extending collective bargaining rights to state workers, and allowing persons who have sex change operations to revise their birth certificates.

Mori voted for the collective bargaining rights and the ban on aerosols as the ADA preferred. He voted for the death penalty and against the "birth certificate" change law, which got him demerits from the ADA. On those four issues, he got 50 per cent, representative of his overall score on the 20 issues.

Rating the legislature overall, the ADA gave it a "B" on labor and consumer protection laws, a "C" on civil liberties legislation, a "D" on housing and clean air and an "F" on conservation, health care, insurance regulation, and welfare reform.

An ADA spokesperson said the legislature was liberal a couple of years ago, but has tapered off into a conservative group.

Mori agreed with that assessment, but added that it's all relative.

"The progressive legislation was passed a few years ago, and now we are paying attention to the administration of those laws," said Mori.

Proponents of Jarvis cite reasons

McFarlane emphatically denied vital services would cease and called offical reports on that possibility "scare tactics" and "immoral."

"People aren't going to (let themselves) go without police protection, fire protection and schools but if they don't come up with legislation in six months we may need a new legislature," he says.

"What better chance for the state legislature to equalize this once and for all by revamping the entire situation," he adds.

McFarlane notes the bill proposed by Sen. Peter Behr (R-Marin County) would mean a property tax cut near 40 percent and says it would be "helpful," but contends, "The thing we really need is a tax limitation."

So Jarvis supporters want state and local governments to stop complaining about lost money, trim fat from their budgets and find better ways of financing the remaining programs.

Among the "creative" alternatives suggested:

— Taxing industrial and commercial properties at a different rate from private dwellings. While these costs might ultimately be passed along to consumers they would still have more choice in the matter.

— Higher state taxes on retail sales, income, transfers and gasoline.

— Equalizing assessed values at the proper level then applying the Jarvis formula. This was McFarlane's recommendation after his organization made a study of property sales in Alameda County and found many assessed far below the legal requirement of 25 percent of market value. Bringing assessments up to standard and applying the Jarvis formula uniformly would reduce the impact of the tax cut, McFarlane contends.

His group's study of 325 houses sold between October and January, cross-referenced with data from the county assessor, reportedly found assessed values averaged on 16.8 percent of their sale price.

The actual range of assessed values was even more disparate, McFarlane said, running from 12 to 26 percent of recent prices in Southern Alameda, from 3.4 percent to only 8 percent for a group of $100,000 homes in Fremont and up to a whopping 48 percent for some homes in the Oakland area.

"Much of the problem rests with inequities with the assessor's office. Arbitrary and capricious assessment practices cause serious inequities and even if they tried to freeze taxes across the board there would still be inequities," says McFarlane.

The ball is in the state's court, say Jarvis supporters, optimistically anticipating passage of the measure which qualified for the ballot easily with 1.25 million signatures while 300,000 more came in late.

"They've been given years and years. There were two initiatives before this that failed simply because legislators said 'We're going to do something about it', but nothing was ever done. If they don't like this last stand they should have been doing something about it," says Couper.

As the election approaches, interest in the measure grows, both in California and nationwide. Paul Gann, coauthor of the initiative says he has been contacted by interested groups in Illinois and New York and supporters feel a movement is starting.

"We'll vote it in in California with 10 percent of the population and we'll give them a message in . Washington, D.C. — loud and clear," says Laczynski.

Pointing to a 13 percent increase in his property taxes, McFarlane asks rhetorically, "Why do they have to have a 13 percent increase in budget when nothing else goes up 13 percent except real estate."

"We don't want to rupture everything and I believe it's going to be hard to do business for awhile but it's going to work out," says Laczynski.

Leggett will not run, too much 'egg on face'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rep. Robert L. Leggett, D-Calif., announced Monday he would not seek a ninth term in the House because "garbage and gossip would be rehashed rather than issues."

The 51-year-old Democrat made his sudden announcement in a five-page statement released by his Vallejo office.

In 1976, Leggett was accused in a Washington Post story of having an affair with Koreanborn Suzi Thompson, 45, then an aide to House Speaker Carl Albert. The report also said the Justice Department was investigating if Leggett did favors for South Korea.

"I may have egg on my face, but not gravy," Leggett said at the time. He claimed he did never did favors for South Korea, but did not confirm or deny he had a sexual affair.

Albert later said Miss Thompson denied she had a sexual affair with Leggett.

Leggett was first elected in 1962. He serves on the House Armed Services and Budget committees.

Leggett attacked the political process in his sometime bitter statement, read to The Associated Press by Wyman Riley, the congressman's district director.

"I have found that I can't efficiently represent people if I am forced to seek big company money and prostitute myself with election promises that I know can't be fulfilled and I refuse to do so," Leggett stated.

After the Post's report was published in July 1976, Leggett said "not one shred of evidence" of wrongdoing was provided by the newspaper or Justice Department.

"The case is simple — there is none," Leggett said.

The Post quoted Leggett as saying he fathered and maintains a second family by an affair with a former secretary.

"I will state that it is unfortunate that aspects of my personal life have been published," Legget said. "However, that is a matter primarily between my wife and myself, and I do believe we have the matter resolved to continue our marriage. The primary problem occurred nearly a decade ago."

The Post also said Miss Thompson introduced Leggett to South Korean embassy personnel who turned out to be memebers of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

Leggett began placing statements in the Congressional Record supporting South Korean President Chung Hee Park, the newspaper added.

In his statement Monday, Leggett stuck to generalities and made no reference to the flap over the Post report or any of the charges contained in it.

He said he was "thankful I have never had to participate" in taking large contributions from any sources. The California native noted that 33 congressman already have indicated they would retire from public service.

Legget accused his political opponents of building a huge financial war chest to battle him in the 1978 election. But he said he was confident he could beat them if he tried.

"I could raise several hundred thousand dollars to match the war chest of the poised minority effort to achieve success in our district," he said, "but what a distortion, what a misuse of funds."

Leggett said he feared "garbage and gossip would be rehashed rather than issues. Many people would be unnecessarily alienated. Innocent people could be smeared and for what?"

Leggett, a native of Richmond, Calif., received his bachelor's and law degrees from the University of California, Berkeley.

He served one term in the state legislature before winning a seat in Washington. Leggett co-chairman of the National Security Task force, and also was a member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, chairing its conservation subcommittee.

His district includes all of Solano, Colusa, Sutter and Yolo counties as well as a large part of Sacramento counties.

Gov. Brown signs three bills into law

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. signed three bills into law Monday, including one that undoes some changes in court procedures made last year.

That bill, SB 1366 by Sen. Alfred Song, D-Monterey Park, repeals Song's 1977 bill intended to simply procedures for filing pre-trial legal documents known as interrogatories and requests for admissions.

Attorneys had objected that Song's earlier bill, which went into effect Jan. 1, did not give them enough time to prepare for the changes.

The other two bills signed Monday will:

—Give the Department of Health $70,000 to continue a sensory motor training program for the developmentally disabled; AB 1012 by Assemblyman Dixon Arnett, R-Redwood City.

—Allow advance payment of state funds for child development services by the state Department of Education; AB 1099; Assemblyman Art Agnos, D-San Francisco.

The battle for Oscars goes out of this world

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This year's battle for the Oscar may be out of this world, with science fiction thrillers "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" among the most popular entries.

Nominations for the 50th annual Academy Awards, narrowed from 209 eligible featurelength films, will be announced Tuesday, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences says.

The Oscars will be awarded April 3.

George Lucas' "Star Wars" and Steven Spielberg's "Close Encounters" share the potential best-picture spotlight with such films as "Julia," "Annie Hall," "The Goodbye Girl" and "Looking for Mr. Goodbar."

Diane Keaton may have been competing against herself for her starring roles in both "Goodbar" and "Annie Hall."

The 209 films include only feature-length English-language or English-subtitled films. Foreign-language films and short subjects are considered separately.

The eligible films were made in the United States, England, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Hon Kong, Spain, Canada, Australia, Sweden and Russia.

Report on Jarvis calls for cutbacks

If approved, the city could be working with an estimated revenue loss of $1,782'556, based on 1975-76 assessed valuation without the two exemptions. If the homeowners and business inventory exemptions were included for 1975-76 net assessed valuation, the calculated revenue loss would be $1,004,028.

With the two per cent per year escalation for 1977-78, the revenue loss without the exemptions would be $1,759,818. With the two exemptions included, the estimated revenue lost would come to $1,977,230.

The tax rate used in the estimates is 46.8 cents per $100 assessed valuation. The current county tax total is $12.86, with the city total being $1.50, representing 11.7 per cent of the total base. Under the Jarvis Initiative the total county limit would be $4, and the city's 11.7 per cent share would equal 46.8 cents.

Parness explained in his cover letter that "if this measure is to be almost universally reached are that the effects of this property measure will be almost catastrophic as to the ability of local government to maintain any semblance of current service levels."

Staff reductions given for study purposes would suggest dropping the number of personnel from 166.5 to 67, for an estimated cost reduction of $1,279,940. Maintenance and operation and capital expense coudl be cut $700,000, the report indicated, and closure of Horizons service would reduce expenses by another $25,000, for a possible total expense reduction of $2,004,940.

School district plots superintendent search

Amador and Pleasanton school district trustees will meet with consultant Ferd Keisel Tuesday at 8 p.m. to map the superintendent-search process.

The meeting is open to the public though previously designated as closed personnel.

Keisel was superintendent of the large San Juan Unified School District near Sacramento for 17 years. He is presently assistant executive director for the California School Boards Association and based in Sacramento.

Trustees previously agreed to pay Keisel up to $5,000 to lead the search for applicants and help set the process for screening, interviewing and final appointment.

The two boards have passed on the "in-put" provided by residents of the districts, classified employees, and administrators. They will add their own "preferred background and characteristics" and establish a time line toward a possible early May appointment.

Dr. Bruce Newlin, who left the districts for Norwalk-LaMirada Unified, will return sometime in June or July to help orient the person chosen as superintendent. Trustees have agreed to pay Newlin the cost of his air fare from Southern California, but not lodging or meals, to work with the new executive for up to five days.

The boards are expected to announce the time line for screening and interviewing following the joint meeting with Keisel.

Scholarships offered for Valley women

Awards and scholarships for local women are being offered through the Livermore-Pleasanton branch of the American Association of University Women this year.

The scholarship program is open to any woman who is a resident of the Livermore-Amador Valley, or who graduated from local high schools. She must have completed at least junior standing in September at an accredited four-year college, and must plan to complete her full of course of study in two years.

If the candidate is a senior, she must be willing to complete her education in one year. She must be in financial need, but need not be an "A" student.

Application forms are now available, and must be completed by April 7. Personal interviews scheduled for eligible candidates will be held Saturday, April 15 at the Livermore Library.

The program, which was started in 1966, is supported by funds raised at an annual book sale — this year, to be held March 4 at the Barn in Livermore. Last year, seven awards ranging from $200-$300 were given to area women.

For information, send a self-addressed, stamped, long envelope to Rosemary Coleman, AAUW Scholarship Chairwoman, 1573 Roselli Drive, Livermore, CA 94550, or call Rosemary at 447-6978.

Soviet military outstrips NATO

LONDON (AP) — The British government said Monday the Soviet military buildup is outstripping that of the NATO allies in the air, at sea and on land.

The Labor government report said the Russians are spending between 11 and 13 percent of their resources on the buildup.

"Soviet forces have in many areas been strengthened in size and quality on a scale which goes well beyond the need of any purely defensive posture," it said.

Moscow's military capability goes well beyond Europe into Africa, and the Soviet government is able to deploy military resources rapidly "in support of its political interests in the Third World," the report said.

It gave these examples of the increase in Soviet naval power in the Eastern Atlantic and in land power in Central Europe over the past 10 years:

—The number of nuclearpowered submarines increased from 44 to 104, or 136 percent.

—Missile-armed cruisers and destroyers increased from six to 23, or 283 percent.

—Fixed-wing maritime aircraft increased from 170 to 220, or 29 percent.

—Battle tanks increased from 7,250 to 9,500, or 31 percent.

—Artillery increased from 3,200 to 4,400, or 38 percent.

—Fixed-wing tactical aircraft increased from 1,655 to 1,975, or 20 percent.

The British also outlined what they said is today's balance of forces between the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact bloc and the NATO countries in the Eastern Atlantic and in Central Europe:

—In surface ships, the Communists have 1.2 vessels for every single NATO warship.

—In submarines the ratio is 1.4 Communist vessels to every NATO sub.

—There are 1.2 Communist troops to every NATO soldier.

—The Communists have 2.7 main battle tanks against each NATO tank.

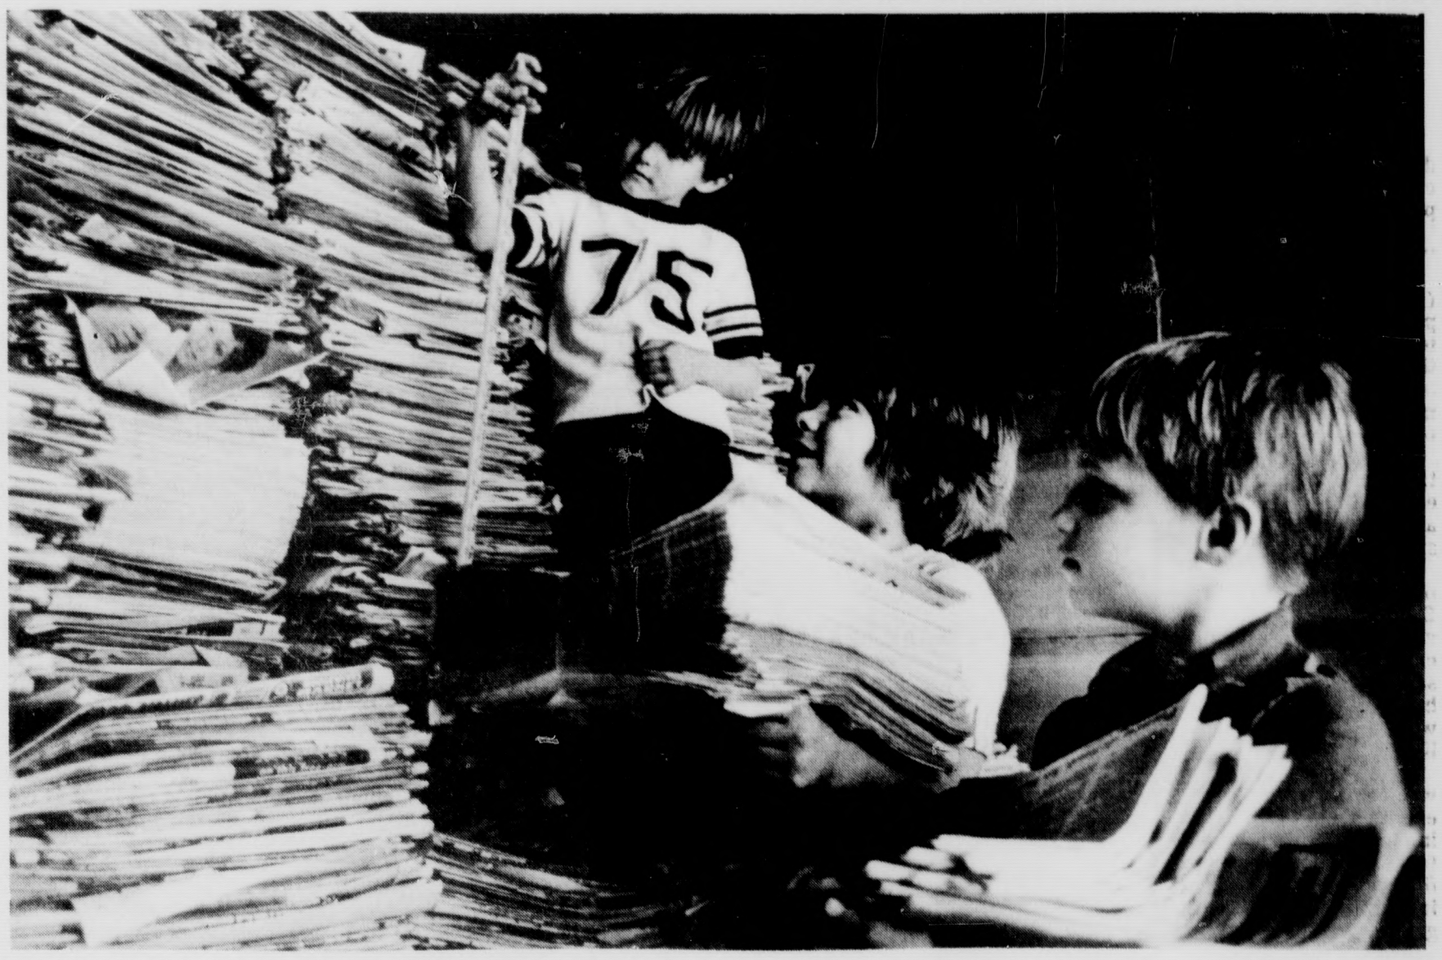
—In sea-based fixed-wing tactical aircraft, there is parity between the two sides. But there are 2.4 land-based, fixedwing tactical airplanes on the Communist side to every one Western alliance warplane.

U.S. defense officials and other NATO leaders have similarly warned of what they describe as an alarming build-up of the Soviet arsenal and have called for an increase in Western military spending.

The British report placed special emphasis on various disarmament negotiations underway between East and West. This seemed to be an attempt to justify the slowdown over recent years in Britain's overall defense efforts.

Jackson drive ending

Jackson Avenue School in Livermore is preparing for the last day of its paper drive this Friday, hoping to reach its goal of eight tons to win the top prize of $25 per ton. Students like kindergartener Charles Duba (left) and second graders Chris Garcia and Billy Duba have been collecting papers and magazines to fill the paper bin in the school's multi-purpose room. Large stacks can be picked up by contacting Jane Callabresi, 443-0606 or Rachael Willis, 447-7574. Proceeds from the drive are slated to go to help furnish the school's library and media center.



Lawmaker's lobby connections

Song's divorce opens Pandora's box

SACRAMENTO (AP) — When veteran state Sen. Alfred Song's marriage disintegrated in a bitter divorce two years ago, it brought to light a series of accusations that the FBI is still investigating.

Song is one of seven current or former state lawmakers described as targets of a lengthy FBI investigation into financial connections between lobbyists and California legislators.

In Song's case, the probe involves, among other things, an expensive gift from a lobbyist before such gifts were outlawed and a plan - later dropped - to go into business with a lobbyist.

There have been no formal charges, and the FBI, which has been questioning Capitol figures for eight months now, won't say if any criminal complaints are planned or who might be accused.

But Song, who is the nation's only legislator of Korean ancestry, has emerged as a key figure - partly because the accusations against him are on the public record in the transcripts of his 1976 divorce case.

It's a startling transcript, filled with accusations of personal wrongdoing and political corruption which Song vehemently denies.

Song says the accusations were made by "a person whose bias and prejudice are obvious - whose credibility should be open to question by any reasonable person."

As chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Song has a strong influence over all legislation affecting the courts of California and the civil and criminal codes. The Monterey Park Democrat has received praise as a civil libertarian and high marks for even - handedness from law enforcement representatives.

He is author of the state's Evidence Code, a consumer warranty law, and the bill creating the state public defender's office.

After it was learned the FBI was investigating Song, two other Democrats, one of them Assemblyman Joseph Montoya, announced they would oppose him in the June primary.

An Associated Press study of some of the incidents being investigated by the FBI and other episodes in Song's career disclosed no illegatities, although some incidents may be politically embarrassing or ground for criticism:

— His attempt, which he later abandoned, to buy a quarter interest in a travel agency whose officers include a prominent lobbyist. Another legislator, then - Assemblyman Leon Ralph, was also considering the same investment for a time.

— A widely publicized 1972 incident in which uniformed deputy county marshals attended a party at the house of Song, who had sponsored legislation the marshals favored.

— Another publicized incident in which Song, in 1971, sent a letter to union leaders chiding them for not patronizing his law firm.

— Song's acceptance of a country club membership paid for by a lobbyist who regularly appeared before his committee.

— A payment that apparently violated no law and that Song says he has repaid in full.

The FBI, which has subpoenaed Song's bank records, is investigating whether any vote by Song or decision as committee chairman was invluenced by favors from lobbyists.

One man who was close to the investigation in its early stages said recently he expected criminal indictments within a few months, but so far there have been no public reports of evidence of criminal activity.

The AP's check of Song's record revealed nothing that contradicted his own statement, in an interview, that gifts he received from lobbyists - before the 1974 political reform act outlawed them - and his continuing friendship with some lobbyists were not particularly different from those of any other longtime legislator.

Numerous sources say a major reason Song came under FBI scrutiny is the court record from his prolonged and bitter divorce case.

Song and his wife, the former Judith Zarrick, were married in July 1974, separated in December 1975, and divorced the following March in an action that she is still contesting.

From the sworn testimony on both sides, it does not appear to have been a happy marriage. It ended in acrimony, disputes over property, and allegations by Mrs. Song of brutality, neglect and numerous instances of criminal political corruption by her husband.

In interviews with The Associated Press, Song and others involved denied the allegations in the divorce suit.

One incident involves the American International Travel Service, Inc., of Los Angeles. Mrs. Song calimed Song and Ralph each received a 25 percent interest in the company in 1975 "in return for favors and lobbying" by Song on behalf of the company.

She gave the court a document from the Air Traffic Conference of America which appeared to show Song and Ralph as 25 percent stockholders in the travel agency and lobbyist Kenneth Ross as 25 percent owner and secretary - treasurer.

But Ross, Song and company president Chester Sandberg all said the legislators had wanted to buy the stock for $5,000 each but couldn't raise the money. And the Air Traffic Conference said the document showed only a proposal to transfer the stock and not an actual sale.

Ross, lobbyist for Santa Anita race track, said in an interview that the $5,000 price was the same he paid for the stock, which he still owns.

Ross said the company wasn't interested in lobbying or favors in Sacramento but hoped Ralph, who is black, and Song would recruit some business in Southern California minority communities.

"The application was made for the transfer of the stock, but subsequently Al couldn't come up with the $5,000, and it was withdrawn," Ross said. "Ralph thought he would like to invest also, but they told him they'd appreciate him coming up with the money first, and he didn't.

"I can't conceive of anything of a lobbying nature" that either legislator could have done for the agency, Ross said.

Song gave the same account. He said he was asked to pay $1,000 down and the rest within a year and "I found I just couldn't make it."

Plane crashes claim 10 lives over holiday

By The Associated Press

Three private plane crashes claimed the lives of 10 California residents and visitors during the holiday weekend. Two more escaped death when their plane plowed into a cushion of soft snow.

Four Southern Californians died in a crash on Genoa Peak in Nevada. Four others were killed in a crash near Morgan Hill on the San Francisco Peninsula. And two San Francisco Bay area men died in a North Carolina forest.

But a young couple from the northern California community of Alamo walked away from the wreckage of their plane on a tall mountainside in the Kings Canyon National Park.

Chief Ranger Bob Smith said the couple was bound from Merced to Las Vegas, Nev., Sunday when their single-engine plane slammed into the side of a 12,500-foot mountain.

"It just sort of kissed the mountain," Smith said.

He said the young couple — Dale Harwood, 30, and his wife, Karyn, 31, both of Alamo — would have been killed in the crash if it weren't for the thick snow. Instead, they suffered only minor injuries.

The bodies of four Southern Californians were recovered Monday from the wreckage of a light plane near a mountain peak 12 miles south of Carson City.

Authorities said the twin-engine plane apparently crashed early Saturday. It was headed for Lake Tahoe from Los Angeles, said Douglas County Sheriff's deputies.

The victims were identified as pilot, William Torpey, 35, of Gardena, Calif., and passengers Richard Allen Steward, 32, Northridge; Arnold Rubalcava, 37, Los Angeles, and Joyce Ann Koethe, 31, Venice.

The downed plane was spotted late Saturday but authorities could not reach the site until early Monday.

Four persons died near Morgan Hill when their plane crashed into the muddy wall of a canyon during a Sunday afternoon recreation flight, officials said.

The pilot was identified as Gary Machado, 23, of San Jose. Also dead was Edward Gissel, 22, of St. Louis. The names of a brother and sister killed in the crash have been withheld pending notification of their parents.

The single engine aircraft left the San Jose airport at about noon Sunday, officials said. First report of the crash came from a resident who saw the plane go down into the canyon but fail to emerge.

How to pick a wardrobe

You can learn how to dress to suit your personality and how to inventory your wardrobe to create a fashion look for yourself at a talk given by Lani Schriber Thursday, Feb. 23 at 8 p.m. at Ye Royale Exchange, 160 So. K St., Livermore.

Schriber was trained in fashion merchandising and worked as an assistant buyer at Joseph Magnin's in San Francisco. She has also taught a course on fashion awareness through Adult Education in Livermore.

She will discuss ways to camouflage figure faults and ways to use design lines to affect appearance.

The public is invited to attend the free consumer clinic. Ye Roayl Exchange sponsors a different speaker the last Thursday of each month at its consignment shop.

Public hearing slated

HAYWARD — The Alameda County Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on a proposal to create an historical preservation district applicable to vicinities near historical sites Tuesday.

The commission will meet at 1:30 p.m. in the county public works building, 399 Elmhurst.

The commission also will examine reports on a proposal to outlaw apartment house discrimination against families with children and to convert rental units to condominiums.

They also face questions about a new policy on division of agricultural lands and are expected to comment on ABAG's Environmental Management Task Force general plan for the Bay Area.

Chiropractic Health Hints

BY DR. RAYMOND SERAFIN, D.C.
A NATURAL HEALTH FAMILY PRACTICE

IF YOU DO NOT ENJOY GOOD HEALTH

CONSULT YOUR CHIROPRACTOR FIRST

DON'T NEGLECT THE WARNING OF A HEADACHE

Pain is nature's warning that all is not well with you. Therefore if you are subject to headaches, the reasonable thing to do is to try to discover what ailment is causing your head to ache, instead of taking a pain killer and letting the matter go at that. If the cause of your distress can be found and removed, your headache will disappear.

The causes of chronic headache are many and varied. One of the more frequent causes of headache is poor elimination. Because some organ is not working properly, poisons accumulate in the blood and affect the brain cells, causing in most cases a dull headache.

A frequent cause of headache is a digestive disturbance, due to bad food, or disorders of the stomach, liver or bowels.

A constant throbbing ache in the top of the head is often the result of high blood pressure, which in turn is caused by disease of the heart, kidneys, arteries or by nervousness.

A type of headache that seems to be getting more common is due to nerve exhaustion. Overwork, loss of sleep and a fast pace use up nervous energy faster than it can be restored. In this way, nerve exhaustion comes on gradually, and one of its symptoms is headache, usually felt in the back of the head where the skull joins the neck.

Eye strain is another cause if headache. In some cases it is in the forehead, but in others it is in the back of the head where the sight centers in the brain is located.

Sinus trouble can cause most severe headache, over the eyes, across the front of the face, or even over the entire head.

Of all types of headache, one of the most common is due to nerve pressure at the spine. An ache from this cause may be felt in any part of the head and is sometimes accompanied by a feeling of tightness at the base of the skull.

If you suffer headaches see your chiropractor for a thorough physical checkup. He can provide relief and also correct the cause of your distressing headaches. For more information on THE WARNING OF A HEADACHE call Dr. R.J. Serafin DC at 846-4732 or write 60 Mission Dr. Pleasanton.

Chicken George of 'Roots' hosts ABC special in March

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — When he was a kid growing up in Brooklyn, Ben Vereen took his first steps toward show biz, courtesy of a passing gent, a kind of flim-flam man for a dancing school.

The guy, Vereen said, "is walking down the street and I'm just doing my kid thing, playing ball. I was about 10. He says, 'Young man, is your mother home'" I said yeah."

And bingo, the man promptly talked Vereen's mother into enrolling the kid in his dance school: "He snowed her on this whole idea of, 'He has the potential to be a dancer.'"

Turned out the guy was right. Ben could dance. And sing. And act. He's proved it in Broadway's "Pippin," his NBC summer series a few years ago, in various TV specials and as Chicken George in "Roots."

Come March 2, Vereen is on ABC again in his own special, "Ben Vereen ... His Roots." But he gives no credit at all to the dance school whence it all began.

Vereen, a mild, gentle guy, says the joint was crowded, a waste of his time and his mother's hard -earned money. But still, it lit up an early desire to join the entertainment fraternity.

"I'll never forget going to the school one day and a cab driver turned to me, saw my tap shoes' and said, 'Ah, I guess you're going to be another Bill Bojangles Robinson,'" he recalled.

"In my head, I said, 'Who's Bojanges?' But I said, 'Yeah, sure.' Didn't find out who he was until much later in my life."

A year later, he said, singing entered his life, courtesy of his godmother, Mary Eddie, wife of a minister. She "kidnapped" him, he grinned, off the streets on Sundays and took him to church.

"She taught me this song, 'His Eye is on the Sparrow,' an old Ethel Waters song," he said. "I sang it the first time in church and she palyed these heavy gospel chords. I just loved it."

Another step in his career: his junior high school principal, Ben Ruskin, urged Vereen to try out for New York's famed High School for the Performing Arts, even though Vereen never considered it.

"I wanted to go into aviation, maybe the Army or Air Force, be a lifer," he said, but the school took him, gave him this first formal training in performing. Later, he met theater guru Tom O'Horgan.

He said O'Horgan, who cast him as Judas in "Jesus Christ, Superstar"' had a school where singers, dancers, actors and musicians taught each other their crafts "and I was fortunate to run into him.

"He believed that theater is one, that all these crafts come together.

Pepperdine's MBA program: exclusively for experienced business people

Just any MBA degree won't do.
Experienced managers and technical people entering management, unlike graduating seniors, need an MBA program that builds on experience rather than ignores it, one that provides early professional payback on the time and money they invest. They need classmates who are business peers. They need a program that minimizes the time conflicts between education, job, and family, yet can be completed in a reasonable length of time.

Pepperdine University's master's degree program in business was designed with these needs in mind.

Focus: the problems that surface with experience
Many professional managers enter our MBA program sensing that their chief managerial problem is themselves.

Thus, the first trimester deals with behavior, yours and others, and is an intense personal experience which pays dividends immediately. The next three trimesters, you update your analytical and problem-solving skills, tackle organizational issues, and work on a project important to you or your organization.

Learn by doing and interacting
We place heavy emphasis on outside reading and work-related projects. That way, seminar time can be spent, not in lecture, but in interchange with classmates who are managers and faculty who have extensive managerial experience as well as high academic credentials.

Meet evenings or weekends near work or home
MBA seminars meet throughout the San Francisco Bay Area either one night a week or once every three weeks, Friday evening and all day Saturday—our way of helping you cope with the demands of work, family and education. In exchange, we ask your attention, not forever, but for 4 trimesters, 16 intensive months, during which we allow no half-load schedules, no dropping in and out.

Non-business majors can enter.
A bachelor's degree is required to enroll, but over half of the MBA participants got their degree in liberal arts, social sciences, engineering or education—not business. Unlike traditional programs, we do not make you backtrack for a complete business major.

Spring trimester begins April 24, with applications due March 17.
Invest an hour. Talk with University representatives, who will be available as shown below. That's the best way to evaluate the program. Please call collect to confirm.

THE CHARACTER OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

John Washington, great-grandfather of George, and a descendant of Malcolm, King of the Scots, was the mate on a small English ship that went aground in the Potomac River in 1656.

While he waited for the ship to be repaired, he fell in love and decided to marry and settle down in the colonies, in Virginia. Within twenty ye: 's, he had amassed 5000 acres of land, including t' land where Mt. Vernon still stands.

According to the calendar in use at the time, George was born, three generations later, on Feb. 11, rather than the 22nd. He showed signs of the great character which he developed, and which had impact on America for generations, helping to determine and establish principles which have made our country great.

Even as a youngster, he was self-disciplined and wished to do right. He compiled the following rules of behavior for himself as a child: This is the way it reads, exactly as he wrote it: "Turn not your Back to others especially in Speaking, Jog not the Table or Desk on which another reads or writes, lean not upon anyone.

"Use no Reproachfull Language against any one neither Curse nor Revile. Play not the peacock, looking every where about you, to See if you be well Deck't, if your Shoes fit well, if your Stokings Sit neatly, and Cloths handsomely.

"While you are talking, Point not with your Finger at him of Whom You Discourse nor approach too near him to whom you talk especially to his face.

"Be not curious to Know the Affairs of Others neither approach those that Speak in Private.

Young George went on to advise: "It's unbecoming to Stoop much to ones Meat. Keep your Fingers clean & when foul wipe them on a Corner of your Table Napkin."

But George Washington was human, as well as disciplined. At age 14 he wanted to join the Navy, but his mother wouldn't sign the papers.

However, by age 17 he supported himself as a professional surveyor, one of the few occupations that was paid for with cash, rather than in tobacco. He kept track of small loans to friends and relatives by writing in his account book. But he wasn't all business. And he wrote down his wins and losses at cards and billiards, as well.

Things did not always go well for George Washington. At age 19 George made his only trip abroad, sailing to the British West Indies, where he contracted smallpox. His face retained pock marks for the rest of his life.

Having returned home to Virginia, George fell in love at age 20, with a 16 year old, Betsy Fauntleroy. He asked her to marry him twice or more, and was refused twice or more. He described it as a "cruel sentence."

As a young military officer, the trying circumstances of his life continued. He wrote to his brother of his close calls with death, having had four bullets through his coat and two horses shot from under him.

He also told of having gone to great expense to outfit his men, of losing the fight, and then losing his commission as an officer. "I have been on the losing order ever since I entered the service..."

And years later, having entered the revolution, Washington was terribly discouraged when he wrote: "Such is my situation that if I were to wish the bitterest curse to an enemy on this side of the grave, I should put him in my stead with my feelings..." But he never gave up.

After he was successful in getting Cornwallis and 8000 British soldiers to surrender in 1781, Washington was offered a monarchy, with himself as the king. But he had no such ambitions for himself.

When Washington died on Dec. 14, 1799, thousands of people wore mourning clothes for months. In France, Napoleon ordered 10 days of mourning. His memory has been honored more than that of any other American.

And a prophetic resolution of the Massachusetts legislature said in 1776: "may future generations, in the peaceful enjoyment of that freedom, the exercise of which Your sword shall have established, raise the richest and most lasting monuments to the name of Washington."

And in days of public scandal and private turmoil, perhaps a return to the values held by George Washington would be helpful.

Their business is educating both consumers and nurses

Bette Felton and Joyce Berger wanted both consumers and nurses to get benefits from health education. So they began offering seminars in which Valley residents may be interested.

Bette Felton and Joyce Berger saw a need. And they decided to fill it.

So, the two registered nurses started up a business to help others in their trade. The program, called "Health Education Associates," will begin March 16 in the Valley, offering health care seminars to area residents who may be interested in the health field.

HEA was originally begun, according to Bette, because the estimated 700 registered nurses in the Valley had to travel miles — to Oakland, Hayward and beyond — to fulfill requirements for continuing education credits.

Nurses must take about 30 hours of continuing education from a certified instructor in orderto retain their licenses, Berger says. Since that kind of instruction was not previously offered here, the two women decided to work on it.

They began HEA with the idea of giving residents — not just nurses — what Felton calls "health education for consumers."

"Everybody wants to learn about their health," says Felton. "To be healthy is a national priority. And it's going to be a way of saving money in health costs."

The two women decided to cover both angles — both nurses and the public — by offering courses which are certified, but still have interest for the consumer.

The first course scheduled is called "Families in Crisis: Parental Stress and Child Abuse," to be held Thursday, March 16 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Howard Johnson's in Dublin. The course, which is worth six credits of continuing education hours for nurses, costs $30 for R.N.'s and $20 for the public. It features local speakers, such as Barbara Tuck of the Parental Stress Service, as well as film, discussion and group work.

Other courses in the future will include dental care, family focuses on dental care, family health guidance, cancer and diabetes.

"We hope to make it a health education exchange," says Berger, where both consumers and those in the field can offer suggestions as to what they'd like to learn. "After all," she adds, "health information is not information — it's for everyone."

For more information on the classes available, call Bette Felton at 462-1238 or contact HEA at Box 432, Pleasanton, CA 94566.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I've tried to raise my two young children according to the book and I think so far I've done a fairly good job. They're bright, do well in school and have many friends. The problem is me! Almost every evening I have a headache because I'm trying so hard to do what's right by the children. My doctor says there's nothing wrong but lately I feel a lot of anger toward them. I know it's abnormal for a mother to feel this way, but I do. Sometimes I wish I didn't have children and that I was as free as some of my friends who follow their own interests. I simply don't know what to do. In my heart I know the problem isn't really the children. W.N.

DEAR W.N.: Your feelings are not abnormal. Almost all parents have mixed feelings about their children and feel different about them at different times. You should expect this and find constructive ways to express your feelings. There's also nothing wrong in letting your children know that you're upset when they displease you even if it isn't a serious behavior problem.

Your headaches indicate that you're under tension and that you're probably carrying some resentment that you're not expressing or facing. You can't successfully bury or ignore your emotions. You may try, but eventually these bottled up poisons come out in some way. They may erupt in an explosion over some relatively minor thing, or they may be expressed through physical illness.

I gather from your letter that you would like to be doing what some of your friends are doing, and I assume, this means that they work. Doesn't the grass always look greener in another's yard? However, you certainly should not deny yourself the opportunity to experiment with different lifestyles as long as you can spend specific time with your children. Since they are in school, you should be able to pursue your interests.

Try to communicate your feelings so that your anger doesn't build up. If they know you love them, your children will also know that anger doesn't deny or destroy love.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I don't really understand my neighbor when she talks about introverts and extroverts. I mean I may be outgoing one day, and the next day I may feel like being alone and quiet. What does this make me? It seems to me most of the people I know are a combination of both of these types as I understand them. Is there really any great difference or are these just more tags that don't have any meaning? B.T.

DEAR B.T.: Yes, there are differences. While it's true that even the most introverted person may have a moment of extroversion and the extrovert may, on occasion, behave like an introvert, they are distinct personality types. Without knowing a lot more about you than what you've indicated in your letter, I couldn't say which type you are.

Studies show that there are even physical differences. For instance, the introvert's body temperature increases more during the morning hours than the extrovert's does. It is just the opposite in the afternoon. Also, each personality type tends to be most alert during the times when body temperature is elevated.

More than three times as many men as women think of themselves as introverts, and studies indicate that women, much more than men, tend to have such extroverted traits as impulsiveness, talkativeness, sociability and interests in the personality of others. Introverts are more apt to develop fears, and tend to avoid potentially dangerous activities.

People are likely to be attracted to the opposite type when looking for a lifetime partner, but when looking for a friend, they may prefer someone more like themselves.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I went to the doctor for midcycle spotting and heavy flowing menstrual periods. He did an endometrial biopsy and examination, diagnosing my condition as endometriosis and adenomyosis and recommended a hysterectomy.

I am familiar with the term endometriosis, but am not sure of what all it means. I have never heard of adenomyosis. Could you elaborate on these terms, also stating your opinion on the surgery? Seems like in this day of modern medicines there should be other cures available besides something as final as surgery. Also do you recommend removal of tubes and ovaries as part of the surgery?

DEAR READER — One of the reasons your doctor did a biopsy was to be able to look at the tissue under a microscope for information that would help him decide if you needed surgery or not. I would certainly not overrule his good judgment unless another competent doctor looked at the tissues and surgical report and had good reason to advise a different course of action. Just how those cells look has a lot to do with what should be done.

Whether the ovaries and tubes should also come out depends a lot on what the surgeon finds when he can actually look at the organs. A woman's age and whether she is near or past the menopause are also important in making the decision. Certainly if a woman had already passed through the menopause and the ovaries were no longer active there is no good reason to leave them in as a potential source of ovarian cancer.

Endometriosis refers to displacement of the tissue that normally lines the uterus (endometrium) to other locations. The tissue may be scattered to the tubes and ovaries — and by its presence cause sterility as well as pain. It may literally seed itself to other areas of the body, usually in the pelvic region. Even though the tissue is displaced to other areas it enlarges with the growth phase of the menstrual cycle and bleeds. The localized bleeding and enlargement causes pain and may destroy surrounding tissue. Extensive involvement of the ovaries may cause considerable ovarian destruction.

Adenomyosis refers to abnormal extension of the lining cells into the muscular body of the uterus while endometriosis refers to extension of the tissue outside the uterus area.

Is there any way other than surgery that these conditions can be treated? Yes. Many cases are successfully treated with hormonal therapy. The hormonal changes during pregnancy stops the advancement and pain of endometriosis.

If surgery is necessary the extent of the endometriosis spread and age of the patient are important in deciding what to do about the ovaries. In a young woman with limited spread to pelvic organs or lack of symptoms the goal is to preserve the ovaries.

Feb. 21, 1978

You can move rapidly ahead this coming year if you keep one thing uppermost in mind: Pick goals you know you can achieve with the experience and mental equipment you possess.

PISCES (Feb.20-March 20) Use sharp or dangerous tools with the utmost care today. Make sure those around you do the same. Save your time off for an enjoyable vacation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Find a private place to pursue a favorite hobby today. It's a fine time to do things that are low key, safe and sane.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Occasionally we all have a tough time leaving the starting blocks, but get a second wind before the finish line. This is such a day for you. Don't despair.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Haste really makes waste today. The things that you concentrate on to the best of your ability are the only ones that'll be gratifying.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Buyer's remorse will haunt you tomorrow unless you use discrimination in purchasing today. Impulse could lead you to grab the first article you see.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22) Recall: Never let the sun go down on your wrath. Because you have a short fuse today, apologize quickly if you explode at a friend's remarks.

VIRGO (Aug.23-Sept.22) Instinct is often valuable, but what you know to be right is the best guide today. That whisper in your ear could be the voice of a mischievous leprechaun.

LIBRA (Sept.23-Oct.23) Guard zealously the possessions you prize today. A friend who borrows them may not have the same respect for them that you have.

SCORPIO (Oct.24-Nov.22) There's more than one way to skin a cat, as the old saying goes. Have another method in mind to promote valuable plans if your first one is suddenly blocked.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.23-Dec.21) The only way to do things today is in the best and most efficacious way you know. Anything done otherwise may boomerang.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan.19) Pals and business mix today, only if you do things according to Hoyle. It would be easy to be breezy and informal, but that could eventually cost money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.19) Before you make any binding commitments today, weigh all the ramifications. You could OK something not in your best interests.

South was very disappointed with the dummy. He might have suggested to his partner that a raise to two spades would show his full strength, but South was too busy trying to figure out a way to collect nine tricks.

He knew where the ace of clubs was, but that left two club losers and there certainly were two heart losers to go with the clubs, so his problem was to avoid the loss of a trump.

East produced the queen of diamonds at trick one. South led a spade to the ace and a spade back toward his hand. East followed to the first spade with the six, to the second with the ten, but South hopped up with his king and dropped West's doubleton queen.

It was a combination of "A" (Analyze the lead) and "R" (Review the bidding) from the acronym ARCH.

South assumed that West would lead a heart if he held ace-king. Hence, East held the heart king as well as the diamond queen. He would have responded if he held the spade queen so West was marked with that card.

Mel Lewis, with Albany's Golden Gate Fields in the distance

Pleasanton's Mel Lewis

47 years in saddle

ALBANY — Mel Lewis, at 63, is a great-grandfather who has never smoked, taken a drink nor given a thought to retirement during 47 years as a jockey.

"I'm not 65 yet. Why think about retiring?" he said after climbing off a mount at Golden Gate Fields.

Lewis and his wife, Edna, have 13 grandchildren. Their first great-grandchild was born last year.

The jockey's face shows most of his 63 years, but there's just a touch of gray in his dark brown hair and his 113-pound body is obviously strong.

"He's a great athlete. Not many men could ride at that age," says Golden Gate Fields placing judge Len Stroud, a retired jockey who is much younger than Lewis.

Lewis hadn't had a winner yet this year at Golden Gate Fields until riding Hasty Martini to a $19 upset in the second race Monday.

He doesn't get as many good horses as in the past, but he's the regular jockey for several owners and trainers and expects to average about 15 mounts a week this year, mostly at Northern California tracks.

"If I didn't feel I could do the public and the trainers justice, if I didn't think I was capable of winning a race, I'd quit tomorrow," said Lewis, a native of Montrose, Colo., who has lived in the San Francisco area the past 20 years.

He's only suffered one injury which caused him to lose riding time. He was at the reckless age of 17 when he broke a collarbone.

"A horse fell under me in a race in Florida, and that's my only injury in all those years. Knock on wood," Lewis said, doing just that on a jockey room railing.

He has more than 15,000 races behind him.

Lewis, who raced against the fathers of some current jockeys, feels he has at least one advantage over most of the kids.

"When I was young, I had to reduce like a son of a gun. The last eight years I've had no weight problem. I can ride a race without ever taking a long breath," he said.

Also at Golden Gate Monday, Sing Back became the meeting's first two-time stakes winner, edging Pleased Look by a nose in the $32,650 Sacramento Handicap.

The five-year-old mare won the 5½-furlong Camino Urso Handicap last month.

Jockey Howard Grant was aboard the 4-5 favorite who lagged off the early pace set by Honey's Policy.

Sing Back and Pleased Look passed the tiring leader down the stretch and waged a furious battle with Sing Back, the high weight, prevailing at the wire by a nose in the time of 1:35.2.

"I didn't have a lot of horse left, but she's game," said Grant of his mount who raised her 1978 earnings to $54,900 by taking home the winner's share of $19,150.

The winner returned $3.80, $2.60 and $2.20, while Pleased Look paid $3 and $2.20. Honey's Policy held on for third, also returning $2.20.

Blalock wins over weather

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jane Blalock battled heavy rain and cold temperatures Monday to fire a 2-underpar 70 and capture the Orange Blossom Classic of the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

The 32-year-old Blalock outlasted veteran Gloria Ehret to win by two strokes on the 6,340- yard Pasadena Golf Club course.

The 54-hole event, scheduled to be completed Sunday, was washed out on Saturday, setting the timetable back one day.

Blalock took away the $9,000 first-place money and Ehret won $6,050.

Sandra Spuzich of Indianapolis and Pat Bradley of Westford, Mass., tied for third at 215. They each earned $3,792.

"I wasn't sure 70 would be good enough to win," Blalock said. "I would love to have the same state of mind I had today, every day. I was so calm and not afraid of anyone. It was like I was in a coma."

Ehret, a former LPGA champion from Dallas, turned in her best finish since 1975, and her final round 68 was the best of the tournament.

The field of 62 Monday was plagued by a constant afternoon rain and temperatures dipping into the 40s.

Kathy Postlewait was alone at even-par 216 and took home $2,585.

Behind her with 217s were Nancy Lopez, Jan Stephenson, Donna C. Young and Sandra Post. They each won $1,951.

Next to the U.S. Women's Open, the The Orange Blossom is the oldest stop on the LPGA tour.

The next event on the 1978 LPGA tour is the Bent Tree Classic in Sarasota, Fla. Play begins Friday.

Livermore's Williams gaining experience

DALY CITY — When the CIF state track meet rolls around in early June Cheri Williams of Livermore High Schoolshould be one of the most experienced athletes entered.

Williams, a senior at Liverrmore, has been keeping busy all winter running in distance races and open meets, the latest Saturday night when she finished third in the women's 1,000-meter run in the Examiner Games at the Cow Palace.

Cheri was clocked in 2.52.7 and finished seven seconds behind the winner, Olympic veteran Francie Larrieu. Larrieu was timed in 2:45.6 and Judy Graham of the West Valley Track Club was second in 2:49.8.

Williams was fourth after the first lap but moved into third on the second one and kept at a steady pace the rest of the way.

"I didn't expect to win because most of the runners in the race have been running for years and years," Williams said after the race. "Third place was good enough."

Williams ran for the San Jose Cindergals in the meet as did four other runners. Another high school star, Roxanne Bier, was last in the field of nine runners with a 3:11.1 clocking.

Despite the fact there is a great deal of difference between running indoors and outdoors Williams doesn't mind running inside.

"It's actually easier," she commented. "The laps are shorter and you don't have to worry about your position as much."

The 'Poke running star competed in the Bonnie Bell National AAU Women's 6.2 mile 10-kilometer race two weeks ago in Beverly Hills and finished eighth in ahuge field. The runners were hampered by a hard rain throughout the race.

Williams will compete in the 1,500 meters in a meet the Cindergals are in this Saturday in San Jose.

And after that comes the high school season and a chance to compete in the state meet again.

In men's competition at the meet Dwight Stones set a Games record in the high

Foyt checks out of hospital in good condition

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — A.J. Foyt, who was injured in a wild crash during Sunday's Daytona 500 stock car race, checked out of Halifax Hospital Medical Center Monday with his left arm in a sling.

A private jet was waiting to wisk him home to Houston.

The four-time Indianapolis 500 winner spent a "reasonably comfortable night" in the hospital concentrated care unit where he was listed in fair condition, according to hospital spokesmen.

Foyt reportedly wanted to leave Sunday night, but doctors wanted to hold him for observation, just as they had done with stock car champion Richard Petty, who suffered similar injuries last Friday.

Foyt lost consciousness, badly wrenched his shoulder, and picked up a variety of bruises in the tumbling ride that his Buick took after being rammed inn the rear by Lennie Pond's Oldsmobile.

Foyt, who had been losing ground to the leaders because of handling problems with his car, was slowing down for an accident in progress in front of him.

It took rescue workers several minutes to free Foyt and hoist him from his pancaked car.

Doctors at the race track's infield hospital said Foyt was conscious again by the time they finished examining him. They sent him on to the city hospital for extensive X-rays and tests for possible internal injuries and broken bones. Foyt was also checked for possible cervical spinal injuries.

CSUH's Green tabbed

Hayward State guard Robert Green was honored as the Far Western Conference Player of the Week Monday for the second time in three weeks.

The hot-shooting guard netted 26 points — 10 in a double overtime period — to lead Hayward to an 83-79 victory over Humboldt State on Thursday.

On Friday, he scored 25 points as league-leading Hayward topped Chico State, 67-55.

The 6-foot-1 junior was a scorching 20 of 30 from the field in the two outings.

Stones sets Examiner mark jump with a 7-foot-5 leap. He defeated indoor world record holder Franklin Jacobs who cleared 7-foot-4.

The high jump competition involved a bit of tricky stragety by the two top finishers.

Stones cleared 7-foot-5 on his first attempt but Jacobs missed. However, the world record holder elected to pass his next two attempt at 7-foot-5 and try for 7-foot-6.

As a result he was only allowed two attempts at that height. On his last try he appeared to have enough height but his trailing leg knocked the bar off as he was going over.

Stones missed all three times at 7-foot-6 and never came close to a successful leap at that height.

Neal Pyke broke the world record in the one-mile walk (not the most common of races) with a 6:04.0 time. His clocking shattered the old mark of 6:18 by Don DeNoon of the Southern California Striders.

Al Feuerbach came through with his best effort of the indoor season to win the shot put, throwing it 68-8 1/2.

"I felt 70 feet was a possibility tonight since I felt good, but I'm still pleased," he said pleasantly..

"The lack of big meets this year and the lack of training time due to the rain hurt my training a bit. I'd like to go 70 feet at the AAU championships next week (in New York).

Mac Wilkins, Olympic champion in the discus, was second in the shot with a 76-1 heave.

Prehaps the most thrilling race of the evening came in the mile where Filbert Bayi of Tanzania edged out Nick Rose of Great Britain and the Mason-Dixon Athletic Club at the tape. Both runners were timed in 4:00.2.

Gonzales duo

HOUSTON (AP) — Richard Gonzalez says trying to play in a tennis tournament every week would have put him in the grave 10 years ago.

"I would have gone bananas," Gonzalez, 29, said Sunday after teaming with his father, Pancho Gonzalez, 49, to win their second straight National Father-Son Indoor Tennis Championship.

They defeated Sammy and Tony Giammalva, Houston, 6-2, 6-4.

Richard did not choose to follow his father into competitive tennis but now is a teaching professional at a Las Vegas Hotel, where Pancho is tennis director.

The father-son championship was worth $4,000.

TURN FOOD INTO ENERGY INSTEAD OF OVERWEIGHT

Yes, with PERMATHENE-12, here's what happens when you take this great new ALL-DAY time-release formula . . . and launch yourself on this wondrous new capsule reducing plan

- Gnawing hunger pangs are suppressed, so it takes less food to satisfy you, meaning you restrict your calorie intake.
- Fat build-up, that up to now you've found impossible to budge, is burned away by your own body chemistry and gradually disappears.
- Gentle diuretic action can help eliminate excess water and bloat.

Not a crash diet — but the most satisfying, fully balanced reduced calorie eating program you've ever seen. Read and follow label directions carefully.

* And even though you may lose pound, after pound, after pound with the reduced calorie eating program in every package . . . you never miss a meal . . . never deny yourself sensible snacks or desserts . . . never for a moment starve yourself one iota!

CURBING THE APPETITE—ONE OF THE MOST EFFECTIVE WEIGHT-LOSS METHODS KNOWN

That's because with the PERMATHENE-12 way to slimness you arm yourself with one of the most modern and effective ways to weight control, reduced appetite and a diet plan that conquers overeating . . . the basic cause of overweight. And because the PERMATHENE-12 ONCE-A-DAY "slim-down capsule program" is working all the time to control your appetite. Following the Permathene Diet plan is by far the easiest way ever developed to achieve that slim, trim body of your dreams.

JUST THINK! YOU MISS NO MEALS—YOU EVEN EAT SENSIBLE SNACKS AND DESSERTS—AND STILL LOSE WEIGHT LIKE NEVER BEFORE!

Yes, with the PERMATHENE-12 low calorie reducing plan you are not asked to constantly battle your appetite. You simply take one of these new ALL-DAY time-release capsules each morning . . . then following the PERMATHENE-12 satisfying eating program, still shed pounds and inches like never before . . . and all without ravishing hunger.

So, no matter what your goal may be—10 . . . 20 . . . 30 pounds thinner . . . here at last is the no-hunger way to LOSE WEIGHT with the finest ALL-DAY ONCE-A-DAY reducing product in America, PERMATHENE-12.

Remember . . . you must lose weight starting the very first day . . . see results the very first week . . . results you can measure on your scale and in the smaller trimmer size of your clothing . . . or money back from manufacturer.

Kirkwood's top ski bum survived all the risks

KIRKWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Dick Reuter has been caught in a big avalanche or two and was nearly killed in a 50-foot fall from a chairlift tower. He's hunted, trapped, logged, dynamited, surveyed, showshoed and skied all over the rugged central and northern Sierra Nevada dividing California and Nevada.

And though Reuter, 54, doesn't like the fact he's been banged around in the process — he lost a rib and part of a lung, broke his shoulder and was chilled on uncounted mountaintops — he's philosophical.

"That's part of the hazard," said the lean, plain-speaking Reuter. "When you're in this kind of business there are risks. If you don't want to do this kind of stuff, don't get into it."

Reuter is mountain manager at the Kirkwood Meadows ski resort.

"There's no use kidding you, I'm not the man I used to be," he said. But he pointed to his head and added, "A lot of it's up here. You can do a ... lot if you're determined."

Co-workers, most of them younger, will attest to that. Reuter, who patrols the big area on skis to check for avalanche hazards, often leaves them huffing and puffing.

During the 1930s drought in the Midwest, Reuter moved with his family to Oroville, Calif., from Nebraska. After military service in Europe during World War II, he returned to Northern California and a life working in the woods.

He took on other work, too, like snow surveys for the California Water Resources Department. That meant treks of 10 days or so, skiing 20 miles a day, to measure snowpack. Helicopters are used for most of that work now.

And at one point Reuter ran a little rope tow for skiers.

In 1955, Reuter started ski patrol work during winters at Squaw Valley. Then in 1962, he went to work full time for the ski resort there. He moved to Kirkwood five years ago.

In the mid-1950s, when skiing was just becoming popular, Reuter and a few others were among the first to try avalanche control by blasting dangerous areas with dynamite, or ski-checking — actually skiing over the hazard areas to start the avalanches.
